Cell expansion control in plant growth and reproduction

Response to the hormone auxin is required for proper flower development and fertilization. Too much or too little cell expansion at key stages can impede reproduction. Small Auxin Up RNA (SAUR) genes promote expansion. Several SAUR proteins localize to the plasma membrane through electrostatic interactions with anionic lipids.